of an even thinner form, that evaporates, and empowers one to move away from dependency on its form.

Zentrolling: Not allowing total freedom to go about unaccompanied.

Zentrolman: One who pounds a beat, until he is arrested, relieved of his uniform, and no longer has to show a badge to be seen in the authority of his station.

Zentronaut: One who gets around the world by leaving its limited atmosphere.

Zentronically: How things work in form, when formlessness is the defining force of their function, as electricity uses a toaster to make toast.

Zentrophe: An indication of possession and contraction, with no apparent difference between them.

Zentrophobic: Of one who habitually stays away from fear.

Zentrophy: A state of being, in which deprivation slowly wastes away.
